

Where Are They Now?

What do I do now?

I am currently a qualified social worker for Hertfordshire county council, working as part of the sensory services team.

What qualifications did I get?

When I left Heathlands, I attended Dacorum College. There, I did a city guild, a BTEC National Diploma and then a Higher National Diploma in fashion design.

What is my advice?

Children need to think about what they are passionate for – basically, what they are good at and what they want to achieve when leaving school. It's a good idea to discuss with your parents or teachers about your future after school. Whatever the best grade you achieve, if you still like the subject, go further with it, or explore things related to that subject or any favourite subjects you might have.
